New ConTex-Commentary - issued: 17.11.22

The container market experienced a slight dip in amount of fixtures being reported after several weeks of high activity level, especially in the smaller feeder segments. Although the overall trend is slightly downward there seems to be a general feeling of the market stabilizing throughout the segments and the arrows are slowly beginning to reflect same. In general, previous growing supply of prompt tonnage is evaporating and there are limited amount of availability for the remainder of the year. The Year-To-Year change continues to be heavily down, as it compares to a period where the market was historically at its peak this will naturally be the tendency going forward. The 1700TEU have experienced the most activity lately and this is reflected in the arrows point sideways with miniscule negative change on a Week-To-Week basis. Although from last month, the 1700TEU has seen the 6/12 month rate plummet with USD 3,500-4,000. The rest of the segments are very evenly matched, with trends moving slightly downwards between 1-3% on a Week-on-Week basis, while on a Month-on-Month comparison down 20-30%. With supply in the 4250TEU and above 'increasing' in 2023, it could result in bigger changes in the New ConTex with more fixtures being reported.
