New ConTex-Commentary - issued:

14.02.19

The prevailing trend of depressed and declining time charter rates continues over the last weeks. Although we have seen a more lively container charter market as activity have moderately soared after the far eastern holidays have passed. By far the most negative affected segment are the 4250 TEU vessels, losing USD 142 per day week on week based on the 24 months period and closing at USD 9.910. For the majority of Owners, it become a more and more tougher call to flex their muscle and fix on last done levels. On the Context, there is just one exception which is the 2500 TEU geared segment. They have been able to register slim and moderate gains of USD 45 per day week on week based on 24 months period and closing at USD 9.950 and thus reflecting the strongest segment within the Context.
