New ConTex-Commentary - issued:		24.06.21
The container charter market continues to evolve at stratospheric levels as shown by the latest ConTex development, with unchanged dynamics of strong demand and short supply of tonnage across all vessel sizes. Charter rates carry on rising, especially in the medium and larger sizes, while slower gains are being observed for vessels of 1,000 teu and under. The shortage of prompt capacities is seeing the few available ships obtaining mind-blowing charter rates, especially for short employments. Over the last fortnight, a further classic panamax vessel of 4,500 teu was fixed well in excess of USD 100,000 per day for a two-month employment. Meanwhile, some desperate shippers unable to load their cargoes due to the lack of capacities have decided to charter tonnage themselves, an unprecedented move in the history of container shipping. As it stands, it is unlikely that the charter market will change direction any time soon, with the upcoming peak cargo season, congestion issues around the world and the chaotic situation in Yantian all contributing to keeping demand at very high levels.
