New ConTex-Commentary - issued:	02.11.23
The New ConTex closes at 570 points this week, another 16 points below last week. This is almost 37% less than a year ago. All size segments for all periods remain in deep red and for the time being we see no real sign for stabilization on the horizon. Demand is still rather weak and the number of available tonnage continues to increase. As already mentioned in previous weeks, political uncertainties, environmental regulations and economical developments claim their tribute and same is likely to prevail well into beginning of next year, too.
