New ConTex-Commentary - issued:	12.09.24
The freight markets have shown a further cooling in sentiment this week. The Shanghai Containerized Freight Index (SCFI) dropped by 7,9% week-on-week, closing at 2510,95 points. Despite this, the container charter market remains stable at a high level across most tonnage segments. As a result, the New ConTex index followed a stable trend, losing just 8 points or 0,6% week-on-week. Liner operators are currently in a "wait and see" mode when it comes to chartering additional feeder tonnage. While the supply of 2,500 TEU vessels and larger remains tight for the rest of the year, the availability of prompt tonnage in the 1700-1800 TEU range has increased, leading to a softening of rate levels. Charter rates for 1700 TEU and modern 1800 TEU ships fell by around 1,3-1,8% week-on-week, but still remain relatively high.
